A FLORIDA 882388

By Lieut. J. M. T. Parlow, U. S. A.

In far southwestern Florida, in Monroe county there lies a great waste of morasa and jungle known as the big Cypress Swamp, and, running along its western border from PuntaHassa, southwards, is an old abandoned stage road dating from the Seminole war, which formed in days gone by the only means of communication between the nearest village, and the few scattered settlers in that lonely portion of the Peninsular

In one of the rude cabins lying close to the edge of the swamp lived Minnle Whaley, only 13 years old, together with her widowed mother, an elder sister and her aged grandfather, a feeble and help-less old man. A half-grown negro boy furnished the help necessary for the cultivation of a small patch of truck-garden, and a half arer of cotton grown annually, together with many designs in basket and fern work, skillfully and beautifully executed by the girls, brought in about the income that the little family were capable of earning.

Early one spring it became necessary for some one of the family to go up to Early one spring it became necessary for some one of the family to go up to Punta Rassa to make a few purchases for the household, and as the mother was unable to leave her home duties, if fell upon Minnie and her sister to make the journey in company.

Right one sunny morning the old-fashioned stage came rolling by, and Bob Wheeler , the driver, with a loud "whoa" brought his lazy team to a standstill. As it happened there was only a single unoccupied seat within the coach, but Bob quickly arranged marters by saying:

One of you young misses get inside and 'tother one climb up here 'longside me. I'll take 'keer' at you both all right, an' no mistake."

The road was lonely and wild erough, running over high ridges, through the kand gloomy hummocks and across deep and rough creeks. Former passengers had told of panthers shot from the top of the old coach, of deer and alligators killed while journeying through the swamp, and ,old Bob, the driver, added to these weird tales by declaring that he had, on several occasions, encountered ghosts in broad daylight while traveling through the swamp.

So they went on until the Leroy hummock was reached—which is a long stretch of heavy, swampy timberland, so dark in places that it is impossible to see whether the sun is shining or not —and, while going along in the darkest part of the woods the passengers were very much startled and alarmed by a shrill, ear-piereing screech which seemed to come from a spot in the jungle close at hand.

The horses pricked up their ears and broke into a trot, and pretty soon the cry broke out again in all its blood-curding intensenesses, and quite near this time, while noises in the underbrush told that something was coming along glaring while its long tall ignily from side to side, r scream issued from its its hery eyes glaring while its long tall switched angrily from side to side. Scream after scream issued from its blood-red mouth, and its terrible eyes blood-red mouth, and its terrible eyes almost snapped fire.

The horses now thoroughly frightened, jumped forward, struggling hereely to get away, and at the same moment the brute crouched for a spring and made a tremendous jump for the coach. The creature miscalculated the speed of vehicle, however, and instead of reaching the driver and his companion, it just touched the rear of the stage, one puw grasping the heavy shawl of the circle of the coach, over which its body hung so that the long tail was actually trailing on the ground.

The report was followed by a terrific yell from the panther, and these noises together with the shoutings of the passengers caused the horses to lungs so suddenly forward that Minnie Whaley was torn forcibly from her seat and hurled headlong to the ground. The panther was also shaken from the coach and it fell down in the road where it lay for a moment furlously enapping at its own sides, and then it espled the young girl only a few yards distant, rising from a bunch of palmetto brush, into the midst of which she had tumbled not much hurt, but from which she emerged fearfully scratched about the head, face and arms.

Meanwhile Bob, the driver, having controlled the team and safely aled them, was racing back along the road, using his utmost speed to reach the spot where the contest between the young girl and the panther was going on He arrived just as the latter was gasping its Jast breath, and Minnia Whaley, recovering from her swoon, rose up in time to greet with smilling eyes the tears of the strong man as they rained down upon her.

FINANCE AND TRADE The Features of the Money and Stock

The Features of the Money and Stock Markets.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Money on call easy at 2½/63 per cent; last loan 2½ per cent; closed at 2½ per cent. Prime mercantile paper 4½/65½ per cent. Sterling exchange steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.853/67 85 for demand and $1.82½/64 83½ ond $1.869 487. Commercial bills $4.81. Silver certificates 65½/65½/6.

The stock market was under pressure from professional bears all day. The volume of business was the highest that has been recorded on any full business day in the past two weeks and the distribution was very poor. The movement was irregular and in many instances narrow, the market displaying tendency to rally whenever pressure was temporarily removed. Operators who are usually in close touch with speculative movements assert that the short interest bild fair to soon become nuweight. comportantly removed. Operators who are usually in close touch with speculative movements assert that the short interest bids fair to soon become unwieldy, a condition that is inducing some interests to take back part of the stocks sold at the top level. Covering is also being stimulated to an extent by the peaceful tenor of the Washington political niviews. Incidentally there is no important selling of long stocks and "splurges," the usually speciacular ing fractional. Hear aggression, however, soon became evident.

American Spirits preferred fell 2½ percent, but the losses otherwise were unimportant. The downward movement was succeeded by a rally, in sympathy with a jump of 4 percent in Consolidated Oas to 167 on a variety of rumors. A reaction followed to 165½. Reading was largely dealt in and gained a point on reports that the reorganizers had succeeded in arranging for large reductions in rentals of leased lines. Leather preferred moved up a fraction on reports that a dividend of 1 per cent would be declared Tuesday of next week. The announcement of a further reduction in the prices of refined sugars scaused only a fractional decline in Sugar stock. In the early afternoon was very duil but prices stiffened sharply all around. In the last hour renewed bear issues caused depression to the lowest figure of the day. The closting was weak at general fractional losses. Rallway bonds were duil.

Governments held firm on dealings of $28.000.

Silver certain sales of stocks to-day were langer.
The total sales of stocks to-day were langer shares.

at a rapid rate.

The driver now whipped horses, and the passengers t long tali was actually trailing on the ground.

The horses went racing madly away, and Bob Wheeler found that he had about all he could in holding on to the rein. Not so with the girl beside him. Minnie Whaley was a heroine, and seeing that the driver could not aid her, she leaned forward and grasped the revolver, and then, turning so as to face the beast behind her, she poked the pistol close to its head and pulled the pistol close to its head and pulled the and arms.

Hob, the driver, gave a groan as he saw his companion fall, and turned to jump off to aid her, but the horses were plunging forward with all their might, while the other passengers, almost saw his companion fall, and turned to jump off to aid her, but the horses were plunging forward with all their might, while the other passengers, zimost seared out of their senses, were screaming to him for help.

Looking back he saw the panther rise up, and then creep towards the girl. She was just coming out of the paimetto brush at this moment, and the driver noticed that she stood erect, firmly holding in front of her the big pistol which she had fortunately clung to in the moment of her fall.

Then he saw the brave girl kneel down, and deliberately point the revolver at the big cat which was slowly creeping towards her.

When within half a dozen yards of its intended victim the beast rose, lashed itself in a furious fashion, and then, crouching low, with a hideous scream launched lis huge body into the air directly towards the kneeling girl.

Poor Bob had now pulled up the struggling horses, and as the panther leaped, the closed his eyes and shuddered.

A pistol rang out, and another and yet another—three in all—and then opening his eyes, the man looked back and shouted for joy at what he saw.

The brave girl, with every nerve set, held the pistol quite straight, and as the panther leaped, the laped in the population of the bruite's body would have borne her to the earth and crushed the life out of her frail form. As it was, she leaped nimbly to one side, and as her big antagonist roiled head over heels in the road site fired every cartridge left at her struggling fee, and then, as exhausted nature kave out, she recled for a moment and fell over in a swoon.

Meanwhile Bob, the driver, having centralled the read and safely and greatering the read and safely and greatering the read and safely
